BOUCAN

RESTAURANT & BAR

Boucan is The Hotel Chocolat's own restaurant, where guests can experience Cacao Cuisine. The word "Boucan" refers to the traditional West Indian name for a cocoa drying facility. The restaurant is built on the site of the Rabot Estate's original Boucan. Boucan is also linked to "boucaneer" or "buccaneer," the local pirates who would smoke and dry their food to preserve it for long trips at sea.

The Boucan offers a strong connection with cocoa and chocolate. For over 3,000 years, cocoa has been used as a savoury ingredient and for 500 as a sweet ingredient. The menu explores both, with the chefs taking their inspiration from the fresh cocoa growing all around the estate, together with amazing local fish and seafood, salad, vegetables and plentiful fruit. However the cuisine is far from cocoa heavy. The menu often makes use of cocoa as a light, subtle spice or as an infusion.

The desserts make full and imaginative use of the estate cocoa, with each evening meal rounded off with the day's new chocolate creation.

Boucan's breathtaking minimalist design includes a soaring roof inspired by the shape of the cocoa tree, with its branches reaching to the sky, and shaded by the lush rainforest canopy. Its high platform is a centre stage for the Big Nature views all around. The kitchen is theatre style with views of our chefs creating cocoa cuisine.
